Earth Revealed

Museum of Science and Industry Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

In the fall of 2009, Design Island produced compelling multi-media for the Earth Revealed Exhibit, located in the Museum of Science and Industry Chicago.

Using technology developed by NOAA and NASA, Earth Revealed showcases an up close and near real-time view of planet Earth on an animated 6-foot globe suspended from the ceiling. Images projected onto the sphere show data from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, so the Earth's atmosphere, ocean currents, storm formation and temperature changes are featured.

The Design Island team produced the media content for four support screens that compliment the data sets viewed on the globe. The support screens feature close-ups of natural disasters, life on earth, weather and geographic beauty. The Earth Revealed program is designed to run using a live facilitator with guest interaction or as a stand-alone presentation.
