Cattle Raisers Museum

Fort Worth Museum of Science and History

Design Island is currently developing and producing multi-media for the new Cattle Raisers Museum scheduled to open at the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History in the fall of 2009.

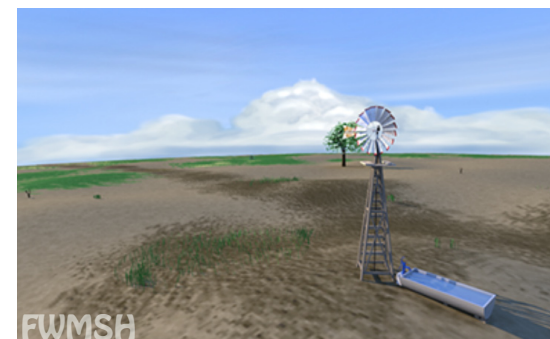

A full dome planetarium experience showcases the story of cattle raising and immerses the guests under the stars. The planetarium is a new state-of-the-art system and features 5 projectors and surround sound. Other multi-media transports the visitors through time from the industry's early beginnings to modern day. Using a combination of soundscapes, interactives, and projection the dynamic history of the cattle and ranching industry is told.

Design Island is working in close collaboration with the Museums internal education team, and with their team of history and science advisory group.
